In Society.

The delightful autumn days are being supported to the fullest. Society has sheeled and piculoked, and the falter numbers have disported themselves gally abroad in fetching gowns and the most bewildering autumn millinery. Parties at the fair, at the races and the Salt Palace have been the vogue, while indoor amusements have also come in for a large share of attention. he Sait Palace have been the vogue, while indoor amusements have also ome in for a large share of attention. The decorations were exceedingly handsome and most effectively arranged. In the hall palms and plants were stationed. The drawing room was in red and white. Exquisite red roses and feathery white chrysanthemums banked the mantel and were placed artistically around the room. Fink and green were used in the library, with beentiful effect, while in the doorways graceful ropes of smilax were caught back with ribbens. The dining room was entirely decorated in the shades of the American beauty rose. In the center and at opposite corners stood huge cut class bowls filled with American heautles and tied with stiff bows of ribbon. The caudelahra were shaded in roses and the bonbon dishes were outlined in rose leaves.
